The Daily Press

HONGKONG, DECEMBER 17TH, 1869.

By a notification which appears elsewhere, it will be seen that there is a prospect of an amalgamation being effected between the two Dock Companies in Hongkong. When this matter came before the public last, this step was strongly advocated in this paper, and it is unnecessary to reiterate the arguments then used. The most important one is that founded upon practical experience of what has taken place with respect to the like matters elsewhere. It is well known that at Shanghai the two Docks were long found to be losing speculations until they came to reasonable terms for working together. The fact is not to be overlooked, that the principles of competition which apply admirably elsewhere, cannot be worked to the same results in such a limited sphere of action as Hongkong, and it is consequently a mistake to act as though such were the case. The feeling, which had sprung up between the two companies, on account of a misunderstanding in the course of the negotiations which were some time ago carried on, was one which could lead to no good to either side. The failure of one Dock would not have proved the fortune of the other. If the "Union" had succumbed to the competition, it is quite certain that the property would have been bought up, and the business carried on by another company, and the end, for which so much had been sacrificed, would have proved useless, when it was attained. Under such circumstances, by far the wisest course was to endeavour to work together; and it is satisfactory that there is evidence of sound counsels having influenced the two Companies. It may be hoped that at the meeting, which is to be convened, the matter may be finally settled upon a common basis. There can be no doubt that a failure to do so will be to the disadvantage of all concerned.

It is a subject of somewhat interesting speculation how it happens that settlements of tea continue to be made at Canton, instead of in Hongkong. It might be thought that the superior facilities for sale offered by a large trading Emporium, where the heads of houses are mostly stationed, would be of such importance that native dealers would find it to their advantage to bring goods down to this port, at least, to a very large extent. But from some strange cause, this does not happen; and it would perhaps astonish many at home to know that it may be said almost with perfect safety that, during the whole time Hongkong has been in existence as a place of foreign trade, not a single chop of Tea has been purchased in it in the ordinary course of business. Some months ago, a Chinaman advertised a parcel for sale; but this was probably from an accidental cause. Canton is thoroughly recognised as the port for the sale of the Tea, and the business has been going on there for years, notwithstanding the undoubted fact that Hongkong offers considerably greater facilities.

The circumstance is the more curious when it is remembered that precisely the opposite working of trade has taken place in the north. There new ports were opened up the Yangtsze, which at first seemed to offer great advantages in the way of trade, but gradually were found to be less and less availed of as markets for the sale of produce. During the present year, especially, it has been a subject of note that the natives have to a very great extent preferred bringing down their Teas to the Shanghai market, instead of disposing of them at the ports, more near at hand, where purchasers have been found to affect all the River ports. Under these circumstances, it seems astonishing that Canton should hold its own as a place of sale, when all the relative advantages which Shanghai offers as compared with Hankow, are to be found in Hongkong as compared with Canton. It is probable, however inconsistent such a view may seem at first blush, that these two opposite effects are due to a common cause, namely, that peculiar arrangement of things, which for want of better knowledge of the special subjects to which it applies, we designate in the familiar pidgin, "Olo cussum." This, in many instances, embraces very much more than custom, though the peculiar tendency of the Chinese to fall back into old habits, has no doubt much to do with it. There are connected with every branch of business, a number of vested interests—arrangements as to transport, as to barrier duty, and numerous other like matters—which gradually work the trade into a certain groove, from which the native dealer finds it difficult or inconvenient to depart. It is probable that this so-called "olo cussum," is the cause why teas are brought down to Shanghai notwithstanding the river ports, and are not brought to Hongkong, although it would offer great advantages. If, however, this vis inertiæ could once be broken through, it seems probable that the native dealer would reap so great an advantage by it, that the trade would become established as a portion of the regular business of Hongkong, in the same manner as has happened in respect to Cotton, which formerly was all brought down to Canton, and sold there. The benefit which would result to the colony from such an addition to its trade, as well as the general gain to commerce from the improved facilities, renders the subject one well worthy of attention on the part of foreign merchants; and, if by any means they can persuade the Chinese dealers to make the attempt of bringing down their produce, it is probable that the success of the first experiments would lead to their repetition, and a great step be achieved towards increasing the importance and standing of Hongkong as the trading emporium of the South.

The scenes described by a correspondent of the Bombay Gazette, of the delights of a stay in Matheran, are strongly suggestive of the advantages that might be gained to Hongkong during the heat of the summer, if only suitable and safe quarters could be found at the Peak—why should there not be a number of private mountain lodges?

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

December 16th, 1869.

BEFORE JAMES RUSSELL, ESQ.

RATHER A STRANGE CARD.

R. McEwen, described as "unemployed," was charged by Inspector Grimes with buying beer drunk.

McEwen appears to have been the subject of strange hallucinations. On Sunday last the reported at the Central Station that he had lost 10 sovereigns; enquiries were made, and this report was found to be untrue, but prisoner was not detained. Last night, however, Mr. Ewen turned up again drunk, with some "cock and bull" story about missing a $1,000 Bank Bill. This was rather too much for the inspector's credulity, and inquiries were instituted, which resulted in the discovery that prisoner was a drunken loafer, "skimming" about the town.

In his defence, prisoner could not specify the time and place at which he had lost the valuable paper, and the magistrate, taking the inspector's view of the case, sentenced McEwen to four days' hard labour, as a rogue and vagabond.

A SLIGHT DELUSION.

Yeong-tsing-foo, contractor, or head coolie in the Military Store Department, was charged with the larceny of some oil, the same being Government property.

By the evidence, it appears that on Sunday last, defendant was supplied by the Commissariat commandere with four jars of oil, for the use of the barracks. Out of this quantity, prisoner managed so economically, as to send two jars to a certain chandler's shop in the Central Market, for sale on his own account. The second had people, (who, perhaps, imagined that he had not received his due share of the squeeze), informed the store-sergeant of this arrangement on the part of Mr. Yeong-teng-foo, which information resulted in a visit to the aforesaid chandler's shop by the Store-sergeant, the recovery of the two jars of oil, and the arrest of the prisoner.

Mr. Brereton (for Mr. Henry C. Caldwell), appeared on behalf of the prisoner, and in defence, while admitting his client's guilt in a legal sense, pleaded "extenuating circumstances" and "custom." He urged that, as his client's was contractor for coolies and drew oil from the Commissariat to trim lamps, he (said client), having apparently rather loose ideas on the subject of "meum and tuum," was labouring under the impression that he had a right to any overplus of oil which he could manage to make "over," and "could do what he liked with the same.

His Worship remanded the case to Saturday next, for further inquiries.

THAT SMOKE.

The magistrate granted a remand to Inspector Grimes in the case of several prisoners who were charged with taking part in the disgraceful disturbances which occurred on Wednesday last in the neighbourhood of the "Five Lamps." The Inspector was of opinion that the fights might occur again from time to time, as most of the principal rioters were still at large. He wished for time to investigate the matter more fully, and apprehend the leaders of both parties.

There were no other cases of note to-day, but Mr. May is still investigating the charge of perjury against the lukongs, with reference to the prisoners convicted at the October Criminal Sessions.

COURT OF SUMMARY JURISDICTION.

BEFORE J. C. WHYTE, ESQ.

December 16th, 1869.

CHUN-A-CHAK v. ALFRED PRAPE.—An action to recover $5, for clothes supplied. Defendant did not appear, and judgment accordingly went by default.

HO-A-FOO v. W. J. WALSH.—This was an action to recover $30.03. The plaintiff was formerly boy and cook to defendant's employ. The present claim is for a balance due for money paid, goods supplied, and for wages. It appears that he entered the defendant's employ in October last, and left on the 2nd day of December, on which day the above sum was due. The defendant admitted the sum of $9.80, which had been paid into court. He therefore, proved to plaintiff had entered his employ on the 2nd of October, under an agreement to supply him and his family with sleeping-room, including cook and boy's wages, at $65 per month. Arrangements for $120 signed by the plaintiff was produced, and defendant admitted the sum of $9.80 as due for extras. Plaintiff left of his own accord, and several days after sent in a claim for $16, but had now increased it to $30.

His Honor remarked that there were several items in plaintiff's account, which he thought must be correct. There was a charge for money paid for boat hire and for guests at dinner, &c. He thought he would be quite right in saying he should go over the account again with the plaintiff, and see if they could not come to some understanding. Both parties accordingly retired, and defendant shortly afterwards returned saying that the matter had been settled, and that plaintiff wish to withdraw the summons. Defendant admitted the sum of $15, which was satisfactory to the plaintiff.

OW-HONG v. J. L. SMITH.—An action to recover $11.20, for goods supplied. Defendant did appear, and judgment went by default.

YEE-WO & Co. v. JOSE DE SOUZA.—An action to recover $10.1 for refreshments supplied by the Red Sea, and other contractors to the Hongkong Hotel. Defendant did not appear, and judgment went by default.

J. P. DAMASO v. T. A. ROZARIO.—An action to recover $20.50 for board and lodgings. Defendant admitted the claim, and stated that he had been at Macao for some months. He wanted time in which to pay. Judgment for the plaintiff.

W. A. JONES v. D. ILLINGWORTH.—An action to recover $150. When called, this case was announced as settled.

V. FERNANDES v. D. BARBADAS.—This was an action to recover $8.00, claimed as the value of a hat. The story of the hat is interesting. It appears the defendant was about to attend a wedding and lacking the important article of dress, a dress hat, applied to his friend, Fernandes, the plaintiff, who lent the hat now in question. The hat had been returned, and rumor said that it had been smashed, while on the head of Barradas, at the wedding.

Defendant did not appear, and in answer to a question from his Honor, plaintiff stated that the hat was not even his own property, but had been borrowed by him from a third party, who was the bona fide owner. Fernandes had advanced the sum of $2.00 as security, when he borrowed the hat, but unfortunately had demanded no security from Barradas, when the loan was made. The real owner was now pressing him to either return the hat or pay its value.

His Honor remarked that it appeared that the hat was not the property of the plaintiff, and therefore he had no right of action against the defendant. The only person who could sue in this case was the bona fide owner. The summons must be dismissed.

There were twenty-three cases upon the cause list yesterday, but the great majority were of a trivial and uninteresting nature. The court rose at a few minutes after twelve o'clock.

KITCHENS AT HOME, AND IN CHINA.

(Shanghai Courier.)

In more favoured lands the kitchen is now environed with a halo of glory, and from that temple of enchantment, where wonders are wrought greater than the achievements of the alchemists of old, rises incense which has the supernatural power of foreshadowing future events. And the high priestess of that temple, Dr. not our earliest recollections, recall the portly form of that potent sorceress, with a face brightened by the honest pride of art, and the polish of soap and water, brandmutting before our wondering eyes, unknown ingredients into puddings and provocatives of stomach-ache? Were we on good terms with this presiding genius of the kitchen fire, who salamander like had the power of sustaining heat beyond human endurance without being consumed; did we receive surreptitious puffs as samples of the pies to be enjoyed legitimately in state, in the presence of our relations and friends; or did our youthful hands seek mischief in the temple of fire, did we ever extract the fruit from the tarts, and leave only the crust and the cup inside, and were the potato ever unaccountably underdone because we had been trying experiments with the roasting-jack? It matters little now, and the scene of our earliest culinary mysteries must be much changed if we are hardy enough, or griffine enough, to make them.

The business of a China kitchen is a very different affair. In a smoky hovel, begrimed in person and disguised in appearance, a repulsive Oriental is stirring something in a black iron pot. The perfume of cabbages biling (for Oriental repasts) possibly pervades the purlieus of the dark den, where in spite of warnings from the more experienced of our countrymen, we insist on searching for our preserving dinner. We find fault of some passing coolie in the wrong direction, and being unable to speak to the cook in his own language, we call "boy" to interpret. We state our grievance, whatever it may be, and learn "That no belong cook." We indignantly exclaim again, "Then where's the cook?" to which we receive the well-considered reply—"Have go buy something." This is one of the acknowledged "unanswerable arguments" of the Celestial mental, and we have to think the vessel is to be found in the native cookery books for foreign service. We probably depart for pleasanter regions, leaving peremptory orders for the presence of the cook as soon as he return from "buying something." He does not soon return—at least we here nothing of him till next morning, when we wake up, with an impression that we have given orders which have not been attended to, and that our dignity compels us to enforce them. We do enforce them—we demand again the interview with the cook. He's buying something else! Such is life for him. He comes: He says nothing. We look stern, and want to know why he cooks Chinese chow chow in our kitchen and does not keep it clean. The boy interprets. The cook does not understand him. He repents, emphasizes. We emphasize. The cook gets bewildered—we lose our temper, the cook leaves the room (with assisted precipitation—the boy follows), and we are alone with our reflections. They are not pleasant. We have asked some friends to dinner,—we hope we have not offended the cook,—we think we must have done so and ring for cook. Enter boy. Cook's pessidee (indisposed). Boy (also calmly) No can have cook dare go way." We thought so and we draw a moral—Don't quarrel with the cook. We try again. Boy recommends a cook. The recommended one comes up smiling and agrees to everything except "terms." The departed cook only had $12.5 a month, the recommended one demands $15. We are indignant at first, but remembering the moral we deduced from our experience we at length agree. The boy very mildly and respectfully suggests that it we have any complaints to make he will be very happy to convey them to the kitchen, and will see that things go right. We gain confidence in that boy. Things do go right for a time. The boy in whom we have confidence is evidently looking after the new comer, and has advised him of the style of cookery to which we have been accustomed, and we see little difference in our dinners, although we are not quite sure about the extra three dollars worth of cook we now possess. But we are roused at last by an incident which we really think unconnected with our economy. We have taken a fancy to fresh curry; we ask the boy if "that cook savey frog curry." We are confidently informed that "he can savey." We order it for the next day's breakfast. Next day comes; breakfast time comes; the frog curry comes, and we notonly contain to excitement but pardonable resentment, when we state that the anatomy of the reptile was perfectly preserved in the dish. This is a fact, and we appeal to any of our readers to say whether we were not justified in again demanding the presence of the cook. We did so. The cook did not present himself, and we accosted some rather pallid boy's hurried visit to the "cook-house." No. 2 cook was there—the same No. 2 cook. We wanted to see the recommended one. The recommended one had intimated that our service was too hot, and on Dec. 23rd he wrote a letter to his half-brother, Mr. Fell, at Philadelphia, saying that he was going back to China, after visiting the Fountain of Moses, and thence to Syria. Since then nothing has been heard of him. As he was a very irregular correspondent in relatives, although receiving no letter from him for a long time, made no inquiry. When home mouths had passed they addressed letters to various American Consuls. His luggage was found at Cairo, and a bag, which he took with him to Suez, at an hotel at the latter place. The landlord of the Suez hotel says he arrived there on the 19th Dec., and on the 24th started, with an Arab boatman, to cross the bay. He was to return in four o'clock. That as the boat was pushing off—two men, who looked like Frenchmen, asked leave to cross with him, and he allowed them to do so. Since then he has not been seen, and no further information has been obtained concerning him, notwithstanding the efforts made by the United States Consul at Alexandria.—London and China Express.

TOUGH STORY.

The Hamilton (Ontario) Times tells the following story respecting Mr. Jasper Hurrell, who, it says, is well known as one of the most accomplished musicians in that city:—In the month of October last, Mr. Hurrell prided himself on a luxuriant growth of beard and moustache, while his head was covered with a profusion of curling locks of a dark brown colour. His complexion was florid, and features well marked, indicating at a glance an age of about 28 or 30 years. At the time mentioned a remarkable process of change commenced. First the hair and beard of the gentleman came out, until but the least trace was left of any hitherto growth. The complexion of the face changed to a delicate hue, but at the same time retaining a healthy flush, while the skin became soft and smooth as that of a child, all traces of any beard being entirely eradicated. A new and vigorous growth of hair presented itself; but of a light flaxen color, and soft and fine as that of an infant. Even the color of the eyebrows have changed, and the gentleman in every feature has undergone a wonderful transformation, and to all appearances has become in age as in youth of 16 to 20. Mr. Hurrell's most intimate friends of nine months since would be unable to recognize him at present, and would readily dispute his identity on oath, unless informed of the change he has undergone. He is now one who had been made young. The case presents an interesting study for the scientific.

THE EXTENSION OF THE ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH EASTWARDS.—THE BRITISH INDIAN EXTENSION TELEGRAPH COMPANY (LIMITED).

It is only in the natural order of things, when direct telegraphic communication with India has been established, that the extension should be extended Eastwards, for to the east lie the Straits Settlements, within comparatively easy reach of Java and China, and of our great Australian possessions. Nearly one-fourth of the telegrams that have hitherto passed over the existing Indo-European lines have proceeded from the commercial activity of those regions; hence the desirability of connecting them with that system, which directly unites us with India by means of the lines of the Falmouth, Gibraltar, and Malta, the Anglo-Mediterranean, and the British Indian Companies whose cables will be opened for traffic in May next.

This is the object of the British Indian Extension Telegraph Company, whose prospectus will be found of great interest by investors in telegraph enterprise. In connection with the Indian lines just named, it is intended to lay a cable from Ceylon to Singapore, touching at Penang and Malacca; and a reference to the map will show the reader that this is, naturally, the first instalment towards connecting Australia and China with the Indian and European systems. The second portion of the scheme proposes the raise a capital of £460,000 in 46,000 shares of £10 each, to accomplish this purpose; but only 33,000 shares are reserved for subscription, the remainder being held by the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company, who have contracted to make and lay the line in 1870 for £440,000. Of the paid up shares so given, £50,000 are to be reserved until the whole line has been successfully laid and has continued in working for thirty consecutive days, equal to the standard of insulation prescribed by the specification. The total length of the cable will be 1,700 miles; it will be similar in type to those made by the Construction Company for other deep sea lines, with the addition of improvements suggested by recent experience.

The promise of this investment will be admitted when the public are informed that the return is estimated at upwards of 18 per cent. per annum upon the capital. The tariff for a message of twenty words between England and Singapore will be £4 4s., out of which the present company will receive 27s.; and the tariff for local messages between the present terminus of the cable will be 20s. Taking the number of messages at 150 daily, of the average length of thirty words at 27s. per twenty words, and allowing 330 working days in the year, the gross annual revenue would be £160,259. Deducting £26,000 for working expenses and for a reserve (£16,000 for the former and £10,000 for the latter), the balance—£74,237—amounts to more than 16 per cent. upon the capital of £460,000. But in estimating the future profits, the traffic yielded, not by projected extensions must be taken into account. These include a cable from Singapore to Hongkong, via Cochin China, and from Java to Australia. With such a system added to the Ceylon and Sir agore Cable, the profits might possibly reach double the present estimate.

It will thus be seen that there is a strong identity of interest between the forthcoming completion of the direct Indian lines and this extension of the system to Singapore, with its feeders to Java, China, and Australia. The general traffic is already enormous, and every year commerce is more and more carried on by means of telegraphic messages. The reputation of the cables made by the Construction Company is thoroughly established, so that the first cables laid on the route are assured for their safe and speedy kindred services; and the influential character of the management will appear by reference to the list of directors. At the head is Mr. Massey, recently the Indian Finance Minister. The late Director-General of Telegraphs in India, Col. Glover, C.B., is also a director, and the others are gentlemen of position and influence, such as Mr. Bevan, the banker.

Under these circumstances it is impossible to doubt the success of the undertaking. It is intended to supply an absolute want in the commercial world; there is every possible security for the service being efficient in all respects; and, as an investment for capital, nothing more promising has hitherto been proposed to the notice of those who are in any way interested in telegraphic progress.

With regard to the contract price, it may be stated that it is not in excess of that of the light cable proposed some time ago by the India, China, and Australia Telegraph Company, an undertaking which appears to have been withdrawn.—Money Market Review.

A FUNNY ADDRESS TO THE VICEROY OF INDIA.

MORADABAD, 23rd October.

His Excellency Lord Mayo arrived here on his way to Nynee Tal, on the evening of the 21st instant, and was the guest of the Magistrate, Mr. C. A. Daniell.

Next morning, between 6 and 7 A.M., His Lordship, with Lady Mayo and the Hon. R. A. J. Drummond, the Commissioner, proceeded on his way towards Nynee Tal in a carriage and four. On the road near the new Government School, where His Lordship was to pass, were assembled the members of the B. I. Association and other native gentlemen of the city. The Commissioner asked His Excellency to stop for a few minutes to let these native gentlemen pay their respects. The request was granted.

Upon this the Commissioner kindly beckoned them forward. Syudad, the secretary to the association, submitted to His Excellency a volume containing several copies of the association's "Literary Journal," which is published monthly, and on the part of the members of the association he presented the following "address":—

"To His Excellency the Most Noble the Right Honourable Richard Southwell Bourke, Earl of Mayo, Viscount Mayo of Monycrower, Baron Naas of Naas, K.P., G.C.S.I., Viceroy and Governor General of India.

Brilliant as the sun, which enlivens the world with its light.

Refulgent as the moon which succeeds the darkness of the night.

Your Lordship's illustrious personage has graced the city of Moradabad with your auspicious arrival.

Your Lordship most humble, obedient and dutiful servants therefore take the liberty of conveying to your Lordship the joyful feelings of the B. I. Association on this occasion.

They all heartily welcome and hail your Lordship's arrival with feelings of loyalty and gratitude, offer their humble respects, with their earnest prayers for your Lordship's long life, and happy and prosperous career in this country, and earnestly solicit your Lordship's patronage of their institution. Your Lordship's most obedient and dutiful servants."

(Sd.) RAJA SEROOAJ SING, C.S.I., RAI PURDOOMUN KISHUN, NAWAB MOHAMAD SAEED-OOD-DEEN AHMED KHAN, NAWAB FIDA ALLA KHAN, CHOBEY KISHAB NAUTH, SAHOO GOKUL PERSHAD, and GUNGA PURSHAD, Secretary to the B. I. Association.

His Excellency stood up, and taking off his hat, thus addressed the secretary:—"I am much obliged to you."—Delhi Gazette.

LIFE IN MATHERAN.

(Bombay Gazette.)

Well may Englishmen, whose duty doom them to a life of laborner in Bombay, thank the gods that there's such a place as Matheran within easy reach, to escape to from the heat and dust of an October in the "beautiful isle" —beautiful to be sure at a considerable distance. This "wilderness overhead" (as its name implies) is eminently adapted for a few days' pic-nicing, and holiday-making. Nature seems, with her usual maternal tenderness, to have provided the lofty retreat as a refuge and breathing-place for the unlifeable Englishman, and surely there must be special joy in store for the aerial biogrife of it. A few days—however few—on this elevated and enchanting spot, free from physical toil and mental anxiety is as far superior health-renewer to any that is concocted at a druggist's, and certainly much more reasonable in point of price. Change of air and scene is the best (and we should think) of Oriental Phœbus, must gratefully consider Matheran an invaluable blessing, especially as it is a blessing which is not, like the generality of blessings, placed beyond human reach. A couple of hours drive by railway, and then a couple of hours horseback or in palkee, and you are in Paradise (supposing Paradise to have been a cool place) compared to the barobnose Bombay. In the morning you are in a sort of vapour bath, your mind in a state of lethargy, and your spirits (if you have any) are soon —when the Dog star rages in Bombay—pronounced (if you care) to be near Heaven by some 2,000 feet, smiling the delicious mountain air, pure and invigorating, and feasting your eyes on scenery which may almost bear comparison with the Alps for grandeur, picturesqueness and beauty. This is a fact—and one by no means ingored by such as think money made only to be spent, and who agree with epigrammatic Martial—Non vivere sed valere vita est.

Though in October Matableshwar is said to be crowded, and Mahableshwar, still the latter is by no means slightly favoured—as is evident from the difficulty with which ponies are procurable, although several people I know have their own horses with them. Here you may see the jockey, we warrant, of Sahib and Bibiana, who was with his family on the car, returning home, was struck by some of the timbers and crushed beneath them, and when he was extricated it was discovered that he was dead. A Miss Percy was severely wounded, having received a deep cut on the head. The emigrant train faired worst. The first passenger car, by the force of the collision, ran into the "Caboose," completely "telescoping." Four emigrants, whose names are not given, were instantly killed, and about fifteen or twenty wounded, some of them seriously. Shortly after the collision, a special train came from Wabtasch station, bringing several physicians, who attended to the wounded. All care and attention was paid to them.

The Rev. M. BIRD AND BEAST.—In a pro-Fenian speech, full of Fenian frenzy, addressed at Castlebar to a meeting on behalf of the Fenian convicts, Mr. George Henery Moore, M.P., is reported by "An Inquirer" in the Times to have referred to the British Parliament as "the beast of Parliament." It's an ill bird that does that to its own nest which Mr. Moore is said to have done. If he does it how long will the other meetlings continue to stand him?—Punch.

Messrs. Several of the enemy wore articles of dress which were at once recognized as those of the late Mr. Powell. It was ascertained at the same time that this gentleman and his lady were murdered in their sleep, but no traces whatever could be found of their son, as his body was not found buried with those of his parents; so, whether he was also killed or carried away is not known.

THE MYSTERY OF THE COUNTERFEIT SEVEN-THIRTIES.

THE MISSING $1,000 TREASURY PACKAGE FOUND.

The Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun of October 18th, says:—It will be recollected that some two years ago it was discovered that spurious seven-thirty bonds were in circulation, and the notes were so well executed that it puzzled the best of experts to discover which was genuine and which counterfeit of that denomination in circulation, and about $60,000 of spurious bonds were taken by the officers in the United States Treasury. Five thousand dollars of these spurious notes were also taken by a Boston banker, and the banker's check given for them. Not long since the supposed dealer in counterfeits, having got recently been arrested in New Hampshire, was brought to Boston for trial. There was a great question rais d in the first instance, after the discovery of the spurious notes, whether the plate was electrotyped in the Printing Bureau in the Treasury Department—at that time under the management of A. M. Clark—or whether it had been engraved outside the department by skilful counterfeiters. Mr. Clark maintained vehemently that the plate could not have come out of the Treasury Printing Bureau, and was not therefore electrotyped. Others, and good experts too, insisted that the spurious seven-thirties were printed on an electrotype plate, and therefore must have been done in the Treasury printing establishment, where the original had all the time remained under the charge of Mr. Clark. The proof has been obtained within a few days past that the plate from which the spurious issue was printed is an electrotype from the original plate, and that the electrotyping was done in the Treasury Printing Bureau. Particulars as to the manner and by whom the counterfeits was obtained are withheld for the present.

The missing $1,000 package sent to the Treasury Department, and mentioned in these despatches several days ago, has turned up. It appears that it was in the shape of a registered letter containing cancelled currency. A Treasury messenger had received a letter at the Post-office, and had taken a street car to go to the Treasury; he evidently dropped the package in the car, and had not observed that it had fallen. The conductor of the street railroad to-day forwarded the letter to the Treasury, enclosed in a note, saying the package was picked up in the car. The letter had no appearance of having been opened.

COLLISION ON THE UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD.

(Salt Lake Oct. 30th.)

FIVE PASSENGERS KILLED—A NUMBER WOUNDED—HOW THE COLLISION OCCURRED.

On Thursday morning, between nine and ten o'clock, a collision occurred on the Union Pacific Railroad, six miles from Wahsatch Station, which is situated eight hundred and six miles from Sacramento, by which five persons lost their lives, and a number were wounded. From a gentleman, one of the passengers on the train, who arrived in this city last night, we obtained the following account:

THE COLLISION.

At the time mentioned, a first-class passenger-train, consisting of locomotive, baggage-car, and five passenger cars, filled with passengers, was westward-bound. After turning a curve in the road, on approaching Wahsatch, the locomotive jumped the track and brought the train to a stand-still. Immediately after the accident, a messenger was sent a short distance to the rear, to get a locomotive which was on a side-track, and back the train as that locomotive might be replaced on the track. Pending this operation, the conductor of the train sent to the rear a red flag—the signal of danger—which was placed alongside of the track, about two hundred yards from where the train was at a stand-still, to warn

THE EMIGRANT TRAIN.

Which was expected every moment. The first-class train was backed and the spare locomotive ran down the track a short distance. This had scarcely been done before the emigrant train was heard coming along at full speed. It consisted of the locomotive "Caboose," and four passenger cars. From the manner in which the train came it was evident that the engineer had paid no attention to the warning signals. The air-brakes were not working. Shares are still Recently a portion of the ruins of the castle at the entrance to the new harbour at Dundee toppled over. Fortunately no person was near them at the time, as it had been noticed by those usually frequenting the place that the foundation had given way after the severe storms. The masonry appears to have been very strongly put together, for, after a fall of about thirty feet, square yards of the building all remain entire.

RIOTS NEAR BARNSLEY.—Recently a large body of strange men, apparently miners, and all armed with bludgeons, appeared at the Newfoundland-row, a number of houses situate near to the Thorncliffe Collieries, where about nine hundred men have been on strike since February last, and began to threaten the non-union men with grievous mutilations. The police drew them off. On leaving the neighborhood of the collieries they took the road towards Mortomley and West Wood, where there are other collieries, and a number of "blacks" reside, and were pursued by the armed police. Lord Wharncliffe and one or two Sheffield magistrates, with part of a regiment of cavalry and two companies of foot soldiers were in the district for some time, but finding that there was apparently quiet, they retired.

KILLED BY A COBRA.—On the 26th August, at Cochin, a boy, aged about fourteen, who had the reputation of being a juggle with charmer, caught a cobra in the garden of Captain Castor's house, but unfortunately he did not obtain a good hold, and he was bitten near the wrist. On coming down with the snake coiled round his hand, he appeared as if nothing had happened, and would not set it off, but carried it with him to some distance. He was told by several of the crowd to bite the snake himself, and, acting on this advice, he bit it all over its body with desperation. It is a notion which has a strong hold of the minds of the natives, that when a venomous serpent attacks any one, if is bitten by him in turn the poison would not take effect so to deprive him of his life, but would only produce leprosy. The action of the poison in this instance was so quick that the boy now became senseless, and relaxed his hold of the cobra, which was then killed. The boy was carried to the hospital, and in a few minutes he was pronounced dead.

GERMAN AND ENGLISH UNIVERSITIES.—There is a professor in the University of Bonn who is a bold man. A short while since he ventured to lift up his voice against the practice indulged in by most of his pupils of wearing their hair in matted locks flowing over their shoulders. This displeased the students, who took upon a thagery bull as indispensable to a scholarly and metaphysical brain; and they went at midnight to howl at the professor, who was just then getting into bed. Instead of remaining, however, the professor put his head out of the window and treated his pupils to a few homely truths couched in pastoral language. He told them he had lately visited England, and seen that at Oxford and Cambridge youths combed their hair and were none the worse for it. Furthermore, that Oxonians and Cantabs managed to obtain from reading their faces with rapiers in absurd duels, and from smoking a habit of getting drunk with beer; and that, nevertheless, he found them much more scholarly and more civil than the gentlemen he had the honour of addressing. This said, he shuts his window and the students, doubtless impressed with the solemnity of the harangue delivered by the erudite professor in his nightcap, withdrew to their homes, most likely to dream of hair-cutting.

ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION.

An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, by the Rev. W. LOBSCHEID, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

FOR scope and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in sciences generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercise for students of a most instructive nature.

It comprises upwards of two thousand large quarto pages.

Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications.

The scope of the work is so great, and its utilitarian purposes so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully, with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasionally.

Lady Byron's Farewell.

[The following poem, which is a true copy of "Lady Byron's Advice" to "Lord Byron's Farewell" to "His Wife," has been exhumed from oblivion by the adherents of the lady.]

Yes! farewell—farewell forever.
Thou thyself hast fixed our doom,
Bade hope's fairest blossoms wither,
Ne'er again for me to bloom.
Unforgiving then hast called me;
Didst thou ever say, Forgive?
For the wretch whose wiles beguiled thee,
Thou alone didst seem to live.

Short the space which time had given
To complete thy love's decay;
By unhallowed passion driven,
Soon thy heart was taught to stray.
Lived for me but feeling tender—
Which thy verse so well can show,
From my arms why didst thou wander?
My endearments why forego?

Of too late thy breast was bared;
Of too soon to me 'twas shown.
That thy love I once but shared,
And already it is flown.
Wrapt in dreams of joy abiding,
On thy breast my head hath lain,
In they love and truth confiding—
Bliss I ne'er can know again.

That dark hour did first discover
In thy soul the hideous stain,
Would these eyes had closed for ever,
Never to weep thy crime again!
But the impious wish, O Heaven!
From thy records blotted be;
Yes, I yet would live, O Byron!
For the babe I've borne for thee.

In whose lovely features, tell me,
All my weakness here confess,
Whilst the struggling tears perhaps permit me,
All the features I can trace—
He whose image never leaves me,
He, whose image still I prize,
Who, the bitterest feeling given me,
Still to love where I despise.

With regret, and sorrow rather;
When our child's first accents flow,
I will teach her to say, Father,
But his guilt she ne'er shall know.
Whilst in memory and in sorrow,
Wakes me from a widowed bed,
On another's arm my sorrow,
With thou feel, no tear wilt shed.

I the world's approval sought not
When I tore myself from thee,
Of its praise or blame I thought not—
What's its praise or blame to me?
He so prized—so loved—adored—
From his heart my image drove;
On my head contempt has poured,
And preferred a wanton's love.

Thou art proud, but, mark me, Byron,
'Tis a heart proud as thine you've won;
Soft to love, but hard as iron
When contempt is on its throne;
But, farewell! I'll not upbraid thee,
Never, never, wish thee ill;
Wretched though thy crimes have made me,
If thou canst, be happy still.

The last of Sir John Franklin's Expedition.
(Concluded.)

"WHAT REMAINS TO BE DISCOVERED."

"My sledge company from Repulse Bay to King William's Land consisted of eleven souls, all Esquimaux. Although they are as untameable as eagles by nature, yet by their aid alone I was enabled to reach points otherwise inaccessible, and, where to gain much important information relative to the fate of Sir John Franklin's expedition, I tried hard to accomplish far more than I did; but not one of the company would, on any account, whatever, consent to remain with me in that country and make a summer search over that island, which, from information I had gained of the natives, I had reason to suppose would be rewarded by the discovery of the whole of the manuscript records that had accumulated in that great expedition, and been deposited in a vault a little way inland or eastward of Cape Victory. Knowing, as I now do, the character of the Esquimaux in that part of the country in which King William's Land is situated, I cannot wonder at for blame the Repulse Bay natives for their refusal to remain there as I desired. It is quite probable that, had we remained as I wished, no one of us would ever have got out of the country alive. How could we expect, if we got into stricted circumstances, that we should receive better treatment from the Esquimaux of that country than the 105 souls who were under the command of the heroic Crozier, some time after landing on King William's Land? Could I and my party, with reasonable safety, have remained to make a summer search on King William's Land, and not only probable that we should have recovered the logs and journals of Sir John Franklin's expedition, but have gathered up and entombed the remains of nearly 100 of his companions, for they lie about the places where the three boats have been found, and the large encampingplace at the head of Terror Bay, and the three other places that I have already mentioned. In the cove, westward of Point Richardson, however, Nature herself has opened her bosom and given sepulture to the remains of the immortal heroes that died there. Wherever the Esquimaux have found the graves of Franklin's companions they have dug them open and robbed the dead, leaving them exposed to the ravages of wild beasts. On Todd's Island the remains of five men were not buried, but, after the savages had robbed them of every article that could be turned to any account for their use, their dogs were allowed to finish the disgusting work. Wherever I found that Sir John Franklin's companions had died I erected monuments, then fired salutes and waved the Stars-and-Stripes over the spots in memory and respect of the great and true discoverers of the North-West Passage.

"RELICS OF FRANKLIN.

"I could have gathered great quantities—a very great variety—of relics of Sir John Franklin's expedition, for they are now possessed by natives all over the Arctic regions that I visited or heard of, from Pond's Bay to Mackenzie River. As it was, I had to be satisfied with taking upon our sledges about 125 pounds in weight of relics from natives about King William's Land. Some of these I will enumerate:—1st, a portion of one side (several planks and ribs fast together) of a boat, clinker-built and copper-fastened. The part of a boat is of the one found near the boat found by M'Clintock's party. 2nd: A small oak sledge runner, reduced from the sledge on which the boat rested. 3rd. Part of the mast of the North-West Passage ship. 4th. Chronometer box, with its number, name of maker, and the Queen's broad arrow engraved upon it. 5th. Two long heavy sheets of copper, 3in. and 4in. wide, with countersunk holes for screw nails. On these sheets, as well as on most everything else that came from the North West Passage ship, are numerous stamps of the Queen's broad arrow. 6th. Mahogany writing desk; elaborately finished and bound in brass. 7th. Many pieces of silver-plate—forks and spoons—bearing crests and initials of the owners. 8th. Parts of watches. 9th. Knives and very many other things all of which you, Mr. Grinnell, and others interested in the fate of the Franklin expedition, will take a sad interest in inspecting on their arrival in the States."

"MUTINY—A SEAMAN SHOT."

"I must now tell you of the heart-rending, tragical part of my expedition before I conclude this rapid, and I must add, incomplete report; for after all it is but a drop in the bucket to giving you a full idea of the vast amount of interesting and important information I have gained of the natives about Repulse Bay, Ingloo lik, Pelly Bay, Neitchilla, Great Fish or Back River, and King William's Land, relative to the fate of Sir John Franklin's expedition. In the spring of 1854 I started from Repulse Bay on a dog-sledge journey to King William's Land. My company was entirely of natives, and on our getting about 200 miles on our way we met a party of Pelly Bay natives, who were fleeing from their country on account of "war in ring there." The effect on my company was that on no consideration could they be induced to proceed further, and therefore, terrible to win the blow to my plans, I had to turn back, trusting that I could succeed in getting a small band of faithful white men out of some whaleships if they should happily make into Repulse Bay. Not until the fall of 1867 was I able to get the desired number of white men to accompany me, besides my Esquimaux interpreters—Joe and Hannah—as sayesort of defence while making the long-delayed sledge journey to King William's Land—and even then it was only at the very last moment—that is, while the whaling vessels were weighing anchors and starting for the States—that I was successful. The result of my taking seamen that neither I nor their captains knew much about proved as many would expect. One of the men, Frank Lober, ever proved during the year I employed the party of five men a most faithful, hard-working and energetic man, fulfilling every position in which I placed him with ability and honour. Two men of the five would, I am quite confident, have proved better men than they did had they not been ill advised. None of the men, except noble Frank Lober, were accompanied on any of my great sledge journeys. In the fall of 1868, during a mutinous attack made upon me, when my faithful man was absent, about seven miles distant, on business, I was compelled, in self-defence, to call into requisition a revolver. Coleman, the leader, fell, and died in fifteen days. At once the rebellion ended, and one of the band came and like a man acknowledged freely and truly that he and his companions were altogether the guilty ones, and hoped that I would forgive him, which I did on the instant. I feel that had I not taken this last "dread alternative" my fate would have been quite as sorrowful as that of Henry Hudson.
